My approach and philosophy about painting is pretty simple. What motivates me and gets me excited about painting is very basic and starts with a curiosity about looking at things around me. I'm not trying to do anything new but at the same time, I'm not trying to further or be a part of any grand tradition of painting.

My paintings, rendered with great economy and focus, and composed with simple structural elements, elicit a quiet, meditative reflection on the essences of light and space. I paint directly from life, the act of looking being a central component to my method. I respond to how light bathes a room and reflects off of various surfaces—walls, windows, and familiar, everyday objects resting on a table—creating a wide range of nuances pulsating with curious energy.” - Dalton Jamieson

Jamieson attended the University of California, Santa Cruz, where he majored in Art History and received his Bachelor of Arts degree in 1988, he also participated in several of Millard Sheets' water color workshops conducted by Tony Sheets in California. He then went on to study painting at the Rhode Island School of Design, Providence. This is Jamieson's first Exhibition at the George Billis Gallery, New York.

The George Billis Gallery marks its 18th year in the Chelsea Art district and its sister gallery is located in the burgeoning gallery district of Culver City in Los Angeles.
