The Story So Far. . .

American Art Collector magazine has changed the way artists, galleries and collectors connect. It has closed the gap that previously existed in the traditional art market. Spectacular and instant SOLD! stories keep rolling in. On these pages, you can read just some of the feedback pouring into our office from coast to coast on sales and connections achieved. And now that the Virtual Version of the magazine launches up to 10 days before the Printed Version arrives, collectors can find new art even faster.

New client purchases two

Artist Stephen Magsig is a familiar face in the pages of American Art Collector having been featured in articles several times before. Most recently, our June issue included a preview of his exhibition at George Billis Gallery.

In the article we showcased three of his paintings, 72nd Street—The Dakota,

Manhattan Bridge Shadows, and the signature piece from the show Hudson and Perry. A new client from New Jersey saw the article and rushed over to the gallery to purchase the latter two works.

"As always we are pleased to have made a new client for Stephen, and thrilled to have the magazine be the inspiration for her to come to the gallery and purchase the pieces," says George Billis, owner of the gallery.

● SOLD! Hudson and Perry, oil on linen, 48 x 60" (above) and Manhattan Bridge Shadows, oil on linen, 36 x 48" (left), by Stephen Magsig, were both sold to a new client from New Jersey

"As always we are pleased to have made a new client for Stephen, and thrilled to have [American Art Collector] be the inspiration for her to come to the gallery and purchase the pieces."

Previous gallery client buys new work

A couple was unable to attend the opening night of the Guillaume exhibit at Xanadu Gallery that was advertised in the March issue of American Art Collector, but they stopped by the gallery the following week to view the show.

The pair fell for two of the artist's bronze reliefs including Disciple, 20 x 36", which was featured in the Scottsdale, Arizona-based gallery's advertisement. Gallery director Elaine Horejs delivered both bronze reliefs to the couple's North Scottsdale home where the art is now part of a wonderful private collection.

● SOLD! A couple purchased Guillaume's bronze relief Disciple, 20 x 36", for $3,900; they also bought a second piece from the artist.
